THE BA PROGRAM

Students completing this program will have demonstrated:

- the ability to think critically about social justice efforts and inequalities in communities and environments
- a solid foundation in sociological theory
- the ability to make linkages between empirical data and theoretical concepts
- development of appropriate research designs and instruments to answer sociological questions
- application of appropriate techniques to the analysis and presentation of data
- the ability to communicate effectively orally and in writing.

Sociology students find an active and supportive departmental culture that surrounds coursework in sociological theory, methods, and current social issues. Department faculty members have a strong commitment to social justice that shapes course offerings and content. Students prepare themselves for sociology-related careers as well as graduate studies. Service learning is integrated into the curriculum through the social problems course that includes volunteering with local community-based organizations.

The Sociology Student Association creates additional opportunities for students to connect with each other, faculty, and local community organizations. Because of the breadth, adaptability, and practical applications of sociology, students with a BA in Sociology choose to work in many different sectors: non-profit, private business, social services, education, health services, public relations, criminal justice, and government.

Preparation

In high school take math, writing and social science courses (history, psychology, sociology).

THE PUBLIC SOCIOLOGY MA PROGRAM

Students completing this program will have demonstrated:

- a solid foundation in sociological theory
- a solid foundation in sociological methods
- professional socialization, including an understanding of social justice and ethical issues
- hands-on experience in either practicing or teaching sociology.

The master's program in public sociology, which focuses on public sociology, social justice and action, fosters a network of students, faculty, staff, alumni and community members who are committed to public sociology, justice and action. Public sociology represents work that takes sociological knowledge and skills beyond the confines of the academy into the communities where these resources are much needed. Whether speaking to girls and boys about media, gender, and violence or consulting with a non-profit on a community survey on corporatization and locally owned business, the work of our faculty and students is tightly interwoven with our local communities.

The concept of social justice emphasizes a holistic understanding of the relationships between people, built and "natural" systems, and the social implications of particular structures and relationships. Race, class, gender, and nation are central to analysis, as well as strategies for action. The action component emphasized in our program is tightly linked to the idea of public sociology. Yet, action represents for us a particular type of public sociology — we understand action as social change work that draws heavily on knowledge of social movements, community organizing, and conflict resolution as particular plans are strategized, implemented, and evaluated.

Our MA students choose an experience emphasis in either Practicing Sociology or Teaching Sociology. Regardless of their emphasis, our alumni graduate with a solid foundation in social theory and social research that is marked by a departmental commitment and curricular integration of public sociology and social justice, as well as knowledge and skills for social action. Sociology faculty members, along with the Sociology and CJS Community Advisory Board, cultivate a range of field placement opportunities for students emphasizing Practicing Sociology.

Students develop their specialization by drawing on coursework, carefully selecting a field placement and working with faculty mentors.

The teaching sociology emphasis introduces students to pedagogy and theories of learning, while providing experience with college classroom teaching. Students explore issues unique to sociology classrooms, while developing approaches effective for education across multiple settings.

The emphasis in Practicing Sociology prepares students for professional positions in research, business, government, non-profits organizations and activist organizations. The emphasis in teaching sociology prepares students for community college and other education-related professional positions. Either emphasis is appropriate for students who wish to continue their graduate study in a Ph.D. program.

Students emphasizing practicing sociology should enroll in thesis or project units concurrently with their field placements (see below).
